

The Social Development Research and Training Laboratory conducts research on social cognitive and affective processes involved in the development of aggression, withdrawn behaviors, and social adjustment among peers. We are especially interested in motivational processes in social perception and behavior in middle childhood, adolescence, and college age.

Social Development Lab

The Social Development Lab of USF needed some improvements and revisions to their existing site.

The site was poorly coded, but I maintained the overall theme of the site while updating it to current web standards.

Features:

- customized navigation
- clean, university friendly layout
- updated HTML standards
